

Wendy Wood

Following on from last month the children were keen to go on a colour hunt and find out which colours appear in the natural environment. The children used colour charts which included shades of different colours. The children were amazed by how many different brown and green items they could find. There were a lot of excited faces when the children returned to the woodland space after a few days to find a massive thistle had grown. The children were keen to examine this and spent time looking at the prickly leaves and talking about how the thistle had grown so big. The size of the thistle was further examined when children decided to measure themselves against it.

Den building has been a popular activity especially in the recent sunny weather as they provided us with a great space to sit out of the sun to continue with our chosen activities. The children extended their indoor work based around the Gruffalo by taking some of the characters on a woodland trip!
